Arts for Action is seeking an exceptional individual to support organisational growth, partnerships and project management. This is initially a part time/consultancy role, with potential to progress to a full-time senior role with strategic and financial management responsibilities.

Arts for Action makes provocative, cross-cultural performance and uses the arts and communication to improve lives. We are a young organisation but have projects in development in Africa, South and South-East Asia as well as the UK. For this reason, we need to expand the leadership team.

The successful applicant will work alongside Artistic Director Melissa Eveleigh to expand impact and reach, secure partnerships and support project management. The ideal candidate will understand the UK and international funding landscape and have substantial experience of working in either international development or the performing arts sector, with knowledge of the other. We are looking for someone entrepreneurial, highly organised and ambitious; a person who will thrive in an atmosphere of growth and change, and be ready to nurture the company through expansion into charitable status and increased global impact. Most of all, candidates must have passion for the positive role the arts can play in society, and ideas for how that role can be strengthened.

This is a rare and excellent opportunity to develop your career and professional profile, and help transform people’s lives. If you want to be part of a vibrant change-making artistic community, connect to talented and extraordinary people from around the world and impact positively on poverty and injustice, we’d like to hear from you.

AN INTRODUCTION TO ARTS FOR ACTION

Arts for Action makes performance and artistic work, applies the arts and communication for positive change. We work with institutions, governments, NGOs, communities and individuals, using creativity, theatre, media and communication for positive, quantifiable change, through training, consultancy, programmes and production.

Both in the UK and overseas, we develop artists, provide devising and physical theatre training, professional development and contribute to strategy and policy. It is an exhilarating time for the company as we take root in the UK and expand projects internationally.

In 2018 we are working on this exciting portfolio:

- Development and early devising phase of a large-scale intercultural historical dance-theatre production telling the story of Indentured Labourers who were shipped from India to South Africa after the end of slavery by the British Colonial Government, in partnership with the Market Theatre South Africa, The Indian Ensemble, Tara Arts and Contact in Manchester.
- Arts Advocacy for Eritrea: production of Karl Hoff’s play I am your Brother with workshop and public engagement programme on the UK’s foreign policy in respect of Eritrea, in partnership with English Pen and One Seyoum.
- I am Africa: a collaboration with Zimbabwean, Malawian and South African performers using Melissa's personal experience of prison in Zimbabwe, a coup within her own organisation and disastrous love affairs with high-profile politicians as the basis of an exposé of Britain’s relationship with Africa.
- Co-production development with Singapore based performers.
- Professional development programme for upcoming performers in the South West in partnership with Lighthouse and Gecko
- Workers’ rights programme in Pakistan in partnership with GIZ
- Arts for Justice in Bangladesh and Myanmar – multiple partners
- Developing Countering Violent Extremism projects in Nigeria and Pakistan
- Development of a standardised legal empowerment qualification for grassroots facilitators with the Governance and Justice Group
- Expanding arts for development programmes in African, South and South-East Asian countries.
- Audition and establish regular programme for the Arts for Action Ensemble
ABOUT FOUNDER/ ARTISTIC DIRECTOR MELISSA EVELEIGH

Melissa has been making theatre and applying arts and communication for development in diverse contexts for 15 years. Trained at The London Institute of Performing Arts, (LISPA) and living and working for 13 years in Malawi and Zimbabwe Melissa’s practice is physical, and embraces a creative pedagogy rooted in local culture.

In 2003 she co-founded and ran Nanzikambe Arts in Malawi, then established Arts Lab in Zimbabwe, and has made award-winning productions with leading companies, including Tumbuka Dance Company and Forgotten Angle. (Cant Talk About This and Standing in Pairs won Ovation awards at Grahamstown Festival 2013)

With an amazing team in Malawi, a national programme for the arts and a national network of community based theatre makers was established: practitioners used social research, interactive theatre, and local media for positive change, and developed a Theatre-for-Decision-Makers model. As well as touring productions across the country and internationally, Nanzikambe Arts programmes quantifiably transformed lives in the areas of governance, justice, women’s rights, sexual and reproductive health, HIV and Malaria prevention.

The model developed and used by paralegals empower prisoners to defend their rights, with the police and at court, reduced prison overcrowding and unlawful detention. This model has been replicated in Kenya, South Sudan, Bangladesh, and the Philippines.

In Zimbabwe, Melissa developed the performing arts programme, Arts Lab, created award winning work with Tumbuka Dance Company, and worked extensively at community and government levels, building relations between local authorities and residents through arts and communication action, in the context of economic collapse and political violence.

In Kenya, Bangladesh, Myanmar, Pakistan and South Sudan she has worked with paralegals, theatre practitioners, local NGOs and social mobilisers to develop theatre for justice programmes.

Recently, in the UK Melissa has collaborated with the David Glass Ensemble, launched the Arts Advocacy for Eritrea project, directed Live Mediation Theatre hosted by Rory Bremner and taught at AUB, LIIPA, and Warwick University.
ARTS FOR ACTION GOVERNANCE FINANCES & FUNDRAISING

Arts for Action is a company limited by guarantee, and in the coming years aims to grow into an NGO overseen by a non-executive Board of Directors.

Our work is funded through a variety of sources including grant income from Arts Council England, partners, trusts or foundations, consultancy payments from agencies such as UN, FCO, British Council or funding from development partners ie GIZ, DFID, SDC or EU.

Over the coming year we want to move from project based funding basis to core ongoing support.

PROJECTS & PARTNERSHIPS DIRECTOR
